Renovation Plans Unveiled Hasler Contacted by the CDC

Colorado Springs, Colo. – The highly anticipated blueprints for the controversial renovation of Lakefront Stadium was released this afternoon by the league office. “We are very excited about the upgrades,” Commissioner Hixson stated. “The plans have been drawn up and approved. All that is left is the construction piece.” Building is set to begin sometime in mid June. The renovation will end by June 30.

“After some initial resistance, we are set to go forward. I think everyone associated with the park is excited about the possibilities,” the Commissioner said. “We will finally have balance between the right and left hands.” Owner and Hall of Famer Bernard Alblinger is thrilled about the upgrades. “It is long overdue and will make this great park even better,” stated the Shangri’ La legend.

The print was designed by none other than Commissioner James Hixson. Hixson found time to squeeze in some electives in architecture class during his six years at the University of Illinois. The renovation plans and design have received an award from The American Institute of Architects or AIA. More information on the AIA can be found here <http://www.aia.org/>

In unrelated news, Shangri La Urine Sample Specialist Dave Cain held an emergency meeting with the Center For Disease Control this morning to discuss the latest findings of last weeks urinalysis tests on two SLW players.

Specialist Cain became extremely troubled when it was discovered that one of the players that was sampled was none other that inaugural Hall of Famer Spence Hasler. “This is disturbing indeed,” stated Dave Cain from his mobile laboratory. “We are still piecing the puzzle together of how Hasler contracted this embarrassing disease. It looks like we have got it somewhat figured out.”
