Commissioner Issues Apology for Remarks During Latest Podcast Preparations Under Way For The 15th Annual Classic

Colorado Springs, Colo. – SLW Commissioner, Jaime Hixson, issued the following statement this afternoon.

“I apologize for my remarks during the flood update portion of last night’s podcast,” Hixson said. “The statement I made about the roaches was inaccurate and misleading. It has been brought to my attention that the roaches showed up after the flood. They were not present before as I alluded to in my statements last night. It was my idea to bring it up on the show to create a Jerry Springer like shock factor and response with guest Nancy Hixson.”

“John, Char, Mom and Dad are all working very hard to clean and rebuild the cabin. Although it would suck to do, I wish I was closer and able to help. I’m punishing myself with a 20-day ban from the SLW Podcast program.”

President of the SLWAA Geoff Hixson added “We are all looking very forward to seeing the new and improved house after all the hard work is complete. It is tragic that the family has to deal with another natural disaster at Shangri La’. I have no doubts the crew will do a fantastic job.”

In the midst of the latest controversy, the league office has begun planning for the 2008 tournament. As it stands today, mandatory arrival will be required for Thursday night (July 3) for the Friday (July 4) Classic.

“We plan on doing the Old/Young game on Thursday,” the Commissioner said. “This will allow people to have the bulk of the weekend to spend with their families. SLW always strives to be as accommodating as possible.”

Transactions: Jeff Cain has been promoted to Supreme Allied Commander of SLW.
